America was once owned by Great Britain. People left Great Britain to live in America. But life in the colonies had its problems. Those problems led to the Revolutionary War.

In 1765, Great Britain needed money. The king tried to get it from the colonies. He passed laws taxing the Americans. Colonists paid tax on paper, tea, and other goods. They complained about these laws. Why should they fund a king who didn't treat them fairly?

Colonists refused to buy British goods. They made their own products instead.

Great Britain sent soldiers to America. Fights broke out. In 1770, soldiers fired into a mob of colonists. Five people were killed. This event is called the Boston Massacre. A couple of years later, Americans struck back. They dressed up as Indians and snuck onto British ships. They dumped 342 chests of British tea into the harbor. This event is called the Boston Tea Party.

The Boston Massacre

In response, Great Britain passed new laws.
They took away even more rights of colonists.
They gave British troops more freedom. Colonists called the laws
"Intolerable Acts."
