Farah's First Day

Farah had just moved to New York with her family from Afghanistan. Farah and her family were refugees. They left their country because there was a war, and they were no longer safe in Afghanistan.

It was Farah's first day at her new school. She was very nervous. She didn't know much about American schools or American children. Farah knew English, but she spoke with an accent that made her sound different from Americans. Farah knew she looked different, too. She wore a head scarf called a hijab. She was worried that kids would make fun of her. She had heard stories about how hard it was for people from the Central Asia to be accepted in America.

Farah's mom walked her to school and left her in the front office. The lady in the office brought Farah to her new classroom. She was going to be in fourth grade. Farah was shaking as she entered the room. She was introduced to her new teacher, Mr. McMillian. Mr. McMillian introduced Farah to the class. The kids in her class were pointing at her and whispering. Farah felt nervous.

Farah asked Mr. McMillian if she could teach the class about her culture. She was excited about the idea. "Let me know if you need help!" he said. From school excited about her dad's idea. She worked all afternoon to bring to school to show her class. Her mom helped her bake cookies.

Farah was excited to teach her classmates about her culture. She showed them pictures of her country. Afghanistan was located on the map. She showed them pictures of her family. Farah explained that she wore a hijab because it showed respect. She explained that she prayed five times a day to stay close to God. The kids were full of questions for Farah. They were fascinated about her culture. They especially enjoyed the delicious cookies she brought. There were more whispers and giggles in her class. She made many friends. The kids learned about American culture, as well. If Farah did hear whispers or giggles, they didn't bother her. She knew these people did not know any better. Farah was proud of who she was and where she came from.

The Haunted House

Every day, Benji walked home from school with his best friend, Graham. They always passed an eerie house. All of the kids talked about how haunted the house was. They said that an old woman died in the house and her ghost still lived there. Some kids would race up to the house, ring the doorbell, and run away. Benji didn't dare. He stayed as far away as possible.

One windy October afternoon, Graham told Benji that he was going to explore the haunted house. Benji tried to talk his friend out of it. He pleaded with him not to go. The house looked perilous.

"I'm going with our without you," replied Graham. "I want to know once and for all if the house is really haunted."

Graham ran toward the house and disappeared inside the door.

Benji didn't know what to do. He didn't want to go into the house, but he didn't want to abandon his best friend either. He knew that if Graham got into trouble, he would be all alone.

Sea Turtle Rescue

It was a normal Saturday at the beach with my family. I was walking along the sandy shore with my brother Matt. Suddenly, Matt exclaimed, "Look! This shell is moving!"

We crouched down to look at the tiny shell in the sand.

"That isn't just a shell! It is a baby sea turtle!" I replied excitedly. "It looks like it is struggling to find the water."

"Let's ask Mom what to do," Matt said. "You stay here, and keep an eye on the turtle. I'll be right back!"

The Big Spring Clean

The beginning of spring meant one big thing: the entire family turn the house upside down. This year's annual spring clean was approaching. "Rosita, Carmen, we are having our annual spring clean. We will go through every drawer, shelf, closet, and box. Anything old, worn, or used in six months is to go into a pile." Rosita and Carmen moaned. This was going to be a long weekend. They had to head their mother's request. That weekend was long. The sisters went through every drawer, shelf, closet, and box. They had trouble saying goodbye to some of their old toys. "You don't need them," their mom said. "They will enjoy playing with them and you will enjoy playing with them and your sister. This made the girls feel a little better, but they still missed some of the toys they used to play with. The next weekend, Mom planned to take them to a shelter for women and children.

Sick Day

Miah woke up feeling miserable. She clutched her stomach and ran to the bathroom. She barely made it before she got sick. Miah's mom came running and helped Miah back to her bed.

"Oh, no!" Miah protested. "I have to go to school. I've never missed a day, and I want to get the perfect attendance award."

"Miah, you are very sick," Mom reasoned. "You can't go to school. You can't even stand up. If you are around other kids, you could get them sick, too."

Miah burst into tears. She loved school. She was one of the best students in her class. She had earned the perfect attendance award every year.

"Your health is more important than an award," Mom explained. "You need to take care of yourself so you can get better."

Miah was devastated. She felt horrible all day. She watched TV and slept, hoping to feel better soon. The day passed very slowly. All Miah could think about was school.

ALIGNS TO SCIENCE OF READING

Research shows that wide reading has the biggest impact on student reading progress.

Our passages provide that essential variety of nonfiction structures and topics.

Students need scaffolded instruction to access grade level texts. Without it, students are not exposed to linguistic and textural features, putting them further behind.

Our texts help students grow full-steam ahead. With certified Lexile levels in the Common Core text complexity band, students will 100% engage with appropriate text and sentence structures, vocabulary, and more. Plus, every passage provides teachers with opportunities to scaffold instruction.

Fun fact! From 2nd grade on, students make greater reading gains when taught from texts that are as much as two grade levels above their "instructional" reading level.

Lead the way! Our texts are leveled to master grade-level expectations and set students up for success.

ABOUT LEXILE LEVELS

 MagiCore Learning, LLC is a certified Lexile® Partner. These texts are officially measured and approved by Lexile and MetaMetrics® to ensure appropriate rigor and differentiation for students.

The Lexile Framework® for Reading measures are scientific, quantitative text levels. When the Lexile of a text is measured, specific, measurable attributes of the text are considered, including, but not limited to, word frequency, sentence length, and text cohesion. These are difficult attributes for humans to evaluate, so a computer measures them.

Common Core State Standards uses Lexile level bands as one measure of text complexity. Text complexity ranges ensure students are college and career ready by the end of 12th grade. Lexile measures help educators scaffold and differentiate instruction as well as monitor reading growth.

Words & Phrases

Literal Language

Means exactly what it says

Example: My class went on a field trip to the zoo. We saw elephants.

Nonliteral Language/Figurative Language

The author uses language beyond its literal meaning. Oftentimes, figurative language compares one thing to another. Authors use figurative language to help readers use their imagination.

Example: My class was a zoo. Kids were jumping around and yelling.

The Big Spring Clean

The beginning of spring meant one big thing in the Ramirez household. Mom had the entire family turn the house upside down for an annual spring cleaning. This year's annual spring clean was approaching quickly. Nobody looked forward to a weekend spent cleaning.

"Rosita, Carmen, we are having our annual spring cleaning this weekend. We will go through every drawer, shelf, closet, and basket. Everything you haven't worn or used in six months is to go into a pile to get rid of," Mom explained.

Rosita and Carmen moaned. This was going to be torture, but they knew they had to heed their mother's request.

That weekend was long. The sisters went through all of their belongings. They had trouble saying goodbye to some of their toys they hadn't played with in six months.

"You don't need them," their mom said. "There are other kids who don't have toys. They will enjoy playing with them and appreciate them."

This made the girls feel a little better, but it was still hard to say goodbye to some of the toys they used to play with.

The next weekend, Mom planned to take the things they were getting rid of to a shelter for women and children.

"Rosita and Carmen, I'd like you to come with me to help," Mom requested.

The girls were aggravated. "It will just be another weekend wasted on Mom's clean-up frenzy!" they complained to each other.

©2015 Bobbie

They went along begrudgingly. When they arrived at the shelter, they brought their bags and boxes into a large room. There were women sitting on cots.

The girls were shocked to see children even younger than them with their moms.

Rosita opened a bag with stuffed animals. She brought a teddy bear over to a little girl who was sitting quietly in the corner.

"This is for you," Rosita said to the little girl. The little girl grinned from ear to ear. She took the teddy bear and hugged him close.

Rosita and Carmen handed out all of their toys and clothes to the children. The girls understood why their mom wanted them to come with her. Getting rid of things they didn't need wasn't just to organize their house. They were helping people who didn't have as much as they did. The girls thanked their mom for bringing them.

"I think we should have spring cleaning twice a year," Carmen suggested on the car ride home.

The Race for Class President

It seemed like just another normal Friday in Mrs. Wilson's second-grade classroom. That is, until Mrs. Wilson made the big announcement.

"Boys and girls, it is time we elect a class president."

Mrs. Wilson explained that a class president would help solve problems other students had. He or she would also listen to ideas that classmates had about activities and events.

"The class president should be a great communicator. The president should also be someone you can trust," explained Mrs. Wilson.

The more Mrs. Wilson explained the job of the class president, the more excited Greta became. She loved to talk with her classmates. She also loved to help them solve problems. Greta knew she would be perfect for the job.

Mrs. Wilson explained how the students would need to campaign. They could campaign by making posters and giving speeches about their goals and ideas as class president. Greta's brain swirled with ideas for her campaign.

That afternoon, the lunchroom was swarming with students in Greta's class talking about who would run for president. Bella, one of the most popular girls, planned to run.

Greta's heart sank with disappointment as she heard the news that Bella planned to run. She knew she didn't stand a chance against Bella. Everyone loved Bella, but Greta wasn't willing to give up yet.

Greta spent the whole weekend making colorful campaign posters with her family. She wrote a speech about how hard she would work for her classmates. When Monday came around, Greta was prepared to go head-to-head with Bella.

When Greta got to school, her heart sank when she saw Bella's posters. They were printed posters with computer graphics. They looked so professional next to Greta's hand-drawn posters. Bella delivered her speech to her classmates. The class erupted in applause at the end. Greta's classmates cheered for her, but not nearly as loud as they did for Bella.

Pencil Behr

When it came time to vote, Greta knew her chances were dismal. By the end of the day, Mrs. Wilson had tallied the votes. She was ready to make the big announcement.

"Our race for class president was close! Our winner only won by two votes! Our class president is... BELLA!"

Bella beamed with excitement. Greta felt a rush of disappointment pass over her. Even though she lost, Greta knew she should always be a good sport. She went up to Bella after school.

"Congratulations, Bella. I know you will make an excellent class president."

Bella said, "Thanks, Greta! I was thinking... Since the race was so close, maybe we could talk to Mrs. Wilson about having you as the vice president. I think you could really help me out."

Greta was thrilled at Bella's idea. Mrs. Wilson also loved the idea of the girls working together. Greta was thankful she gave the race for president a try. If she had given up, she never would have had the chance to be the 2nd Grade Vice President.

Test: Becca's New Look

Becca was devastated. Her doctor had told her that she needed to wear glasses. She didn't want to wear glasses. After her appointment with the doctor, Becca debated with her mom.

"Mom, I am going to look nerdy with glasses. All of the kids will make fun of me," Becca complained.

"You are going to have to get over it, Becca," her mom replied. "Your grades are dropping. You can't see the board. The doctor said that you need to wear glasses, or your eyes will get worse."

Becca moaned and groaned, but there was no convincing her mom. The next week, Becca went to school with her new glasses. At least she was able to pick out pretty purple glasses and a flowery case. Becca thought to herself, "Mom will never know if I don't wear my glasses. I will just keep them in my case."

Becca sat down in her seat to begin her morning work. She hid the flowery case inside her desk. Mr. Ken looked up from his desk as Becca squinted to see the board.

"Becca, I see you straining your eyes again. Your mom called me this morning and told me about your new glasses. Take them out so you that can see," said Mr. Ken.

Becca slumped deep in her seat. Not only did she have to wear her glasses, but every kid in her class was staring at her, waiting to see her put her glasses on.

Becca imagined snickers as she slowly placed the purple glasses on her face. Her cheeks were beet red.

A girl named Kim passed a note to Becca. Becca opened it. "I love your new purple glasses!"

Becca looked up and flashed a grin at Kim. She felt a little better.

©2016 Becca

That day at recess, Becca approached Kim and thanked her for complimenting her new glasses.

Kim said that she really did love her glasses. She didn't need glasses, but she wanted to buy frames because she thought they looked cool.

Becca realized that she had overreacted. Her glasses weren't a big deal to anyone except her. Nobody cared if she wore glasses. She was still the same girl she was before.
