Answering Questions

Landon threw on her bright pink shirt. Her cabin mates at Camp Tikiwawa wore a pink shirt too. They huddled together and put their hands in the circle, one on top of the other. "Pink power!" they all shouted as they threw their hands in the air. They headed out the door for the most fun day of camp, "Color Wars". Color Wars was a day when each cabin chose a color to wear and competed against the other cabins in events like the three-legged race, swimming, and canoeing. The very first event was going to be tug-of-war. Landon could not contain her excitement.

I peer out the bars of my cage and do my best to fluff my fur and look really cute. A family is here! They are searching for the perfect pet to complete their family. I just know it is me. I love all the kind humans who have taken great care of me, but it is time I find my people, my new family to love. I wag my tail excited as a tiny little girl walks by. Her big blue eyes pause when she notices me. She comes closer. She smiles and pets me through the bars. "Mama, it's him! He is the one. I know he is supposed to be ours. I just know it." My heart beats so hard with excitement. I know too, these are my people. Today, I'm going to be adopted! It is the best day ever!

Answering Questions ?

I don't mean to pat myself on the back, but I was a video game expert. It was my favorite thing to do. That is until the aliens came. The little green creatures spilled out of the spacecraft in my backyard. I couldn't believe it. They said they wanted to learn how Earthlings have fun. I was on it! I brought out my tablet, my computer, even my TV, but they were not interested. They said they already had all of those things. They were more interested in toys, real toys. I scratched my head. I had lots of toys, but they had been collecting dust because I only played on my computer. I pulled out a ball and showed them how to use it. They loved it, and so did I! We did sidewalk chalk, blew bubbles, and I even taught them to ride a bike. "I forgot how much fun playing with actual toys is," I thought out loud. Forget video games! Playing with real things is way more fun!
