The Rusty Truck

Characters: Narrator, Dad, Uncle Tim, Jimmy, Sarah, and Beth

Scene I:

Setting: Several tents are set up in a circle with Dad's pickup truck in the background of the campsite. A fire blazes in the center of the space, and the characters sit on stumps around it, darkness surrounding them except for the firelight.

Narrator: The Crentons are on their annual camping trip to Maine.

Jimmy: (toasts a marshmallow to nearly burning on a long stick over the fire.) Uncle Tim, you promised us a story.

Sarah: (pulls her marshmallow off her stick, making a gooey mess) I want a really scary story!

Dad: (hands Sarah a napkin to wipe her fingers) You won't be able to sleep if it's too scary.

Beth: Aww, Dad, we can handle scarier stories than last year. We're older now. (expertly pulls her marshmallow off her stick with no mess)

Uncle Tim: Beth is right. (builds his s'more and pops it into his mouth) I think this crew is ready for The Rusty Truck.

Narrator: The children finish their s'mores and draw closer to the fire, ready to hear the story. The woods behind them are very dark, and a lone owl hoot-hoots from a nearby tree.

Long Passage

A Patriot is Born

Edward crouched in the shadows behind the Thompsons' barn. He'd been brushing his horse, Cricket, in his own family's barn when he saw a pack of Redcoats. They slipped onto his neighbor's property and walked straight into his barn. What were British soldiers doing in Mr. Thompson's barn? Edward's father had been suspicious of Mr. Thompson before. Just the other night while Edward's mother brought dinner to the table, his father was talking about him.

"He's up to something, Grace," he had said. "I can feel it in my bones, so we'd better keep an eye on Thompson."

Edward had decided to do as his father had suggested. But he wasn't just going to keep his eyes open, he was going to keep his ears open, too. As he got closer, the British soldiers' voices floated out of Mr. Thompson's barn.

"We'll circle around the perimeter of town tomorrow night," one of them said.

"Then, we'll be in position to cut off supplies of all goods. No matter if they're coming in or going out," another said. "It's perfect."

"The only thing that will save them is calling off this ridiculous rebellion and declaring their loyalty to King George," another man said.

Edward slapped his hand over his mouth. That last voice was Mr. Thompson's. His father had been right! Their neighbor wasn't a Patriot at all. He was helping the Redcoats!

But not if Edward could do something about it.
